

Suggested Readings and Resources

Making changes is never easy and the more support and the more resources you can draw upon to help you, the more likely it is that you will be successful. There are often a number of difficult issues that accompany a sleep problem, so below are a variety of resources, including helplines, informational websites, self-help books and self-help apps.

Crisis Resources

Crisis Help Lines/Chats

It is very important to seek help immediately if you are having thoughts about hurting yourself. An important immediate plan for safety is to go to the nearest emergency room. If you do not feel able to do that, calling 911 is an appropriate alternative to going to the emergency room. Some teens are embarrassed or worried about what will happen if they go to the emergency room, however, the focus for the psychiatrist on call is to assess risk for immediate harm, and ensure there is a plan in place for safety. A plan for safety include having you call someone you trust to pick you up and stay with you, and then come up with a plan for ongoing treatment. You do not have to be thinking of harming yourself, to feel like you need immediate support. There are a variety of options for hotlines for immediate support in North America. Here are just a few:

National Suicide Prevention Lifeline (USA): 1-800-273-8255

Canada Suicide Prevention Service (Crisis Services Canada): 1-833-456-4566

Kid's Help Phone (Canada) 1-800-668-6868 or text: 686868

National Alliance on Mental Illness Helpline (USA) 1-800-950-NAMI or text “NAMI” to 741741

Crisis apps

Always There: it is free, confidential and anonymous for young adults living in Canada.

*The Kid’s Help Line resources can be reached via a Live Chat on the website: kidshelpphone.ca

Not ok: it’s free and connects you to your trusted support and sends your GPS coordinates so that you can get immediate help.

Sleep Resources

Since the focus of this book is on teens, we will focus on a sleep-specific app called DOZe since it was developed by the author, and is meant as a companion to this book.

Sleep app: doze

Delivering online zzz’s (doze) is an app I designed in collaboration with teens, other healthcare providers and Pivot health. It was funded by the Canadian Institutes of Health Research and is free to download on www.dozeapp.ca. It is a self-management tool that allows you to track your sleep on your phone, receive feedback about your sleep, access information about how to sleep well and set goals for sleeping better. The tracking feature can be used instead of the paper Sleep Tracker provided in this book. Your personal sleep information from the app can be used to accompany this book. There is more information in this book than the app, so the app should be seen as a helpful companion to this book.

Hints for finding an app you like

An app that that was designed for a problem you are currently experiencing may or may not be helpful for you. If it is helpful, great! Stick with the parts you find helpful. If you do not find the app helpful, move onto to something else. One size does not fit all when it comes to self-help. You can consider going to www.PsyberGuide.org for their list of mental health-related apps. They review apps for clarity, user experience, and data transparency. You can also go to websites from national organizations that review apps and recommend them.

Parent Resources

All of the resources provided are helpful for parents as well, but here are a few parent-specific resources:

Mindell, J.A. & Owens, J.A. (2005). Take Charge of Your Child's Sleep: The All-in-One Resource for Solving Sleep Problems in Kids and Teens.

Finding a Cognitive Behavioral Specialist for sleep-specific problems

If you are looking for provider who specializes in cognitive-behavioral approaches, with advanced sleep medicine training, the following websites provide a state/province list of such providers:

- Society for Behavioral Sleep Medicine (Provider tab): www.behavioralsleep.org
- Canadian Sleep Society (Under Resources > Provider map): www.css-scs.ca

If you are looking for sleep clinic accredited with a sleep speciality, the following two websites provide a state/province list of labs and providers:

- American Academy of Sleep Medicine: www.aasmnet.org
- Canadian Sleep Society (Under Resources > Provider map): www.css-scs.ca

Finding a Cognitive Behavioral Specialist

There are many different resources available for those with insomnia, depression, anxiety and pain. There is an emphasis on sources that are aligned with cognitive and behavioral therapy techniques that have been shown to be effective. These sites may be helpful for providing information and referral help. For example:

- The Association for Behavioral and Cognitive Therapies (ABCT): www.abct.org. ABCT is a group dedicated to the promotion of scientifically supported therapies. By selecting the tab labeled The Public, you can have access to information about different conditions including insomnia, depression, anxiety and pain, information about effective therapies, as well as a Cognitive-Behavioral Therapist locator.
- Canadian Association for Cognitive and Behavioural Therapies (CABCT): Similar to ABCT above, this Canadian group provides information about different conditions and also has a “Find a CBT Service Provider” across Canada <https://cacbt.ca/en/certification/find-a-certified-therapist/>
- Academy of Cognitive Therapy (ACT): info@academyofct.org. ACT can provide referrals to certified therapists
- American Academy of Cognitive and Behavioral Psychology:
<http://www.americanacademyofbehavioralpsychology.org/AABP/FellowDirectory.htm> The AACBP can provide referrals to board certified psychologists in cognitive behavioral psychology
